ADVENTURES IN A BANYAN TREE

Ruskin Bond

I. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow

It was to be a battle of champions. Hissing defiance, his forked tongue darting in and out, the cobra raised three of his six feet off the ground, and spread his broad, spectacled hood. The mongoose bushed his tail. The long hair on his spine stood up (in the past, the very thickness of his hair had saved him from bites that would have been fatal to others).

Though the combatants were unaware of my presence in the banyan tree, they soon became aware of the arrival of two other spectators. One was a myna, and the other a jungle crow (not the wily urban crow). They had seen these preparations for battle, and had settled on the cactus to watch the outcome. Had they been content only to watch, all would have been well with both of them. The cobra stood on the defensive, swaying slowly from side to side, trying to mesmerize marking a false move. But the mongoose knew the power of his opponent's glassy, unwinking eyes, and refused to meet them.

Instead he fixed his gaze at a point just below the cobra's hood, and opened the attack. Moving forward quickly until he was just within the cobra's reach, he made a feint to one side. Immediately the cobra struck. His great hood came down so swiftly that I thought nothing could save the mongoose. But the little fellow jumped neatly to one side, and darted in as swiftly as the cobra, biting the snake on the back and darting away again out of reach. The moment the cobra struck, the crow and the myna hurled themselves at him, only to collide heavily in mid-air. Shrieking at each other, they returned to the cactus plant.

A few drops of blood glistened on the cobra's back. The cobra struck again and missed. Again the mongoose sprang aside, jumped in and bit. Again the birds dived at the snake, bumped into each other instead, and returned shrieking to the safety of the cactus.

1. Who were fighting each other?
2. How did the hair on his spine help the mongoose?
3. Who were the spectators at the battle and where did they sit?
4. The cobra was a good fighter. Pick out the sentence from the passage which proves the same?
5. Was the mongoose an intelligent fighter? How do you know?

Answers

1. A cobra and a mongoose were fighting each other.
2. In the past the very thickness of his hair had saved him from bites.
3. A myna and a crow were the spectators of the battle. They sat on the cactus.
4. The Cobra stood on the defensive swaying slowly from side to side trying to mesmerize the mongoose into making a false move.

5. Yes it was. The cobra tried to mesmerize the mongoose to make a false move. But the mongoose knew his opponent's tricks. He fixed his gaze at a point just below the cobra's hood and opened the attack.

II. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow

The third round followed the same course as the first but with one dramatic difference. The crow and the myna, still determined to take part in the proceedings, dived at the cobra, but this time they missed each other as well as their mark. The myna flew on and reached its perch, but the crow tried to pull up in mid-air and turn back. In the second that it took him to do this, the cobra whipped his head back and struck with great force, his snout thudding against the crow's body. I saw the bird flung nearly twenty feet across the garden, where, after fluttering about for a while, it lay still. The myna remained on the cactus plant, very wisely refrained from interfering again!

The cobra was weakening, and the mongoose, walking fearlessly up to it, raised himself on his short legs, and with lightning snap had the big snake by the snout. The cobra writhed and lashed about in a frightening manner, and even coiled itself about the mongoose, but all to no avail. The little fellow hung grimly on, until the snake had ceased to struggle. He then smelt along its quivering length, and gripping it round the hood, dragged it into the bushes. The myna dropped cautiously to the ground, hopped about, peered into the bushes from a safe distance, and then, with a shrill cry of congratulation, flew away.

When I had also made a cautious descent from the tree and returned to the house, I told Grandfather of the fight I had seen. He was pleased that the mongoose had won. He had encouraged it to live in the garden, to keep away the snakes, and fed it regularly with scraps from the kitchen. He had never tried taming it, because wild mongoose was more useful than a domesticated one.

From the banyan tree I often saw the mongoose patrolling the four corners of the garden, and once I saw him with an egg in his mouth and knew he had been in the poultry house; but he hadn't harmed the birds, and I knew Grandmother would forgive him for stealing as long as he kept the snakes away from the house.

1. How did the crow push itself into trouble?
2. Why is the myna said to be wise?
3. Who won the battle?
4. How did he make sure that the snake is dead? What did the mongoose do?
5. How did the myna congratulate the mongoose?
6. Pick out a word that means "To twist the body"

Answers

1. The crow took part in the fight and missed his mark. As he tried to pull up the cobra whipped with great force and the crow lost his life.
2. Because the myna remained on the cactus plant very wisely and refrained from interfering again.

3. Mongoose won the battle.
4. The mongoose smelt the cobra and made sure that the snake is dead. He smelt along the cobra's quivering length, gripping it round the hood and dragged it into the bushes.
5. The myna congratulated the mongoose by making a shrill cry.
6. Writhe

III. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow

The banyan tree was also the setting for what we were to call the Strange Case of the Grey Squirrel and the White Rat. The white rat was Grandfather's - he had bought it from the bazaar for four annas - but I would often take it from the bazaar for four annas - but I would often take it with me into the roots and branches of the old tree. Banyan tree, where it soon struck up a friendship with one of the squirrels. They would go off together on little excursions among the branches.

Then the squirrel started building a nest. At first she tried building it in my pockets, and when I went indoors and changed my clothes I would find straw and grass falling out. Then one day Grandmother's knitting was missing. We hunted for it everywhere but without success. Next day I saw something glinting in the hole in the banyan tree. Going up to investigate, I saw that it was the end of Grandmother's steel knitting-needle. On looking further, I discovered that the hole was crammed with knitting. And amongst the wool were three baby squirrels--all of them white! Grandfather had never seen white squirrels before, and we gazed at them in wonder. We were puzzled for some time, but when I mentioned the white rat's frequent visits to the tree, Grandfather told me that the rat must be the father. Rats and squirrels were related to each other, he said, and so it was quite possible for them to have offspring--in this case, white squirrels!

1. From where did Grandfather get the white rat?
2. How did the white rat become familiar with the grey squirrel?
3. How did the boy come to know that the squirrel was building a nest?
4. Where did the boy find grandmother's knitting needle?
5. What was the surprise in the hole?

Answers

1. Grandfather got the white rat from the bazaar.
2. The boy would take the white rat with him to the banyan tree.
3. When the boy changed his dress he found straw and grass falling out.
4. The boy found grandmother's knitting needle in a hole in the banyan tree.
5. There were three white baby squirrels in the hole.

IV. Read the following passage from “Adventures in a Banyan Tree” and answer the questions.

“Though the house and grounds of our home in India were Grandfather’s domain, the magnificent old banyan tree was mine chiefly because Grandfather, at the age of sixty-five, could no longer climb it. Grandmother used to tease him about this, and would speak of a certain Countess of Desmond, an English woman who lived to the age of 117, and would have lived longer if she hadn’t fallen while climbing an apple tree. The spreading branches of the banyan tree, which curved to the ground and took root again, forming a maze of arches, gave me endless pleasure. The tree was older than Grandfather, as old as the town of Dehra, nestling in a valley at the foot of the Himalayas.

My first friend and familiar was a small grey squirrel. Arching his back and sniffing into the air, he seemed at first to resent my invasion of his privacy. But, when he found that I did not arm myself with a catapult or air-gun, he became friendlier. And when I started leaving him pieces of cake and biscuit, he grew bolder, and finally became familiar enough to take food from my hands.

Before long he was delving into my pockets and helping himself to whatever he could find. He was a very young squirrel, and his friends and relatives probably thought him headstrong and foolish for trusting a human.

1. Where was the house situated?
2. What gave the author endless pleasure?
3. Who was the boy’s first friend from the nature?
4. What was the squirrel’s first reaction?
5. How friendly did the squirrel become?

Answers

1. At Dehra town, at the foot hills of Himalayas.
2. The scenery of the arching banyan tree.
3. A small grey squirrel.
4. He arched his back and sniffed into the air. The squirrel didn’t like the presence of the boy.
5. The Squirrel became friendly enough to take food from his hands and even delved into his pockets.

V. Read the excerpt from “Adventures in a Banyan Tree” and answer the questions.

In the spring, when the banyan tree was full of small red figs birds of all kinds would flock into its branches, the red bottomed bulbul, cheerful and greedy; gossiping rosy pastors; and parrots and crows, squabbling with each other all the time. During the fig season, the banyan tree was the noisiest place on the road.

Half way up the tree I had built a small platform on which I would often spend the afternoons when it wasn't too hot. I could read there, propping myself up against the bole of the tree with cushions taken from the drawing room. Treasure Island, Huckleberry Finn, The Mowgli stories, and the Novels of Edger Rice Burroughs and Louisa May Alcott made up my bag of very mixed reading.

When I did not feel like reading, I could look down through the banyan leaves at the world below, at Grandmother hanging up or taking down the washing, at the cook quarrelling with a fruit vendor or at Grandfather grumbling at the hardy Indian marigolds which insisted on springing up all over his very English garden. Usually nothing very exciting happened while I was in the banyan tree, but on one particular afternoon I had enough excitement to last me through the summer.

That was the time I saw a mongoose and a cobra fight to death in the garden, while I sat directly above them in the banyan tree.

It was an April afternoon. And the warm breezes of approaching summer had sent everyone, including Grand father, indoors. I was feeling drowsy myself and was wondering if I should go to the pond behind the house for a swim, when I saw a huge black cobra gliding out of a clump of cactus and, making for some cooler part of the garden. At the same time a mongoose emerged from the bushes and went straight for the cobra.

In a clearing beneath the tree, in bright sunshine, they came face to face. Cobra knew only too well that the grey mongoose, three feet long, was a superb fighter, clever and aggressive. But the cobra was skilful and experienced fighter too. He could move swiftly and strike with the speed of light, and the sacs behind his long, sharp fangs were full of deadly venom.

It was to be a battle of champions.

1. What happens to the Banyan tree in the spring season?
2. Which are the different kinds of birds which appear on the Banyan tree in the fig season?
3. Where did the boy spend the afternoons when it was not too hot?
4. What kind of books does he read?
5. What were the usual activities of people he observed from the tree?
6. What was the exciting experience he got on that day?
7. What was the cobra searching for?

Answers

1. The Banyan tree is full of small red figs.
2. Red-bottomed bulbul, rosy-pastors, parrots and crows.
3. On the platform built halfway up the tree.
4. Some of the books that he read were Treasure Island, Huckleberry Finn, The Mowgli stories and the Novels of Edgar Rice Burroughs and Louisa May Alcott.
5. Mother, hanging up or taking down the washing, cook quarrelling with a fruit vendor, Grandfather, grumbling at the hardy Indian marigolds.
6. The sight of mongoose and cobra fighting to death.
7. The cobra was searching for a cool place.

VII. Imagine that the English club of your school has decided to conduct a special assembly in connection with the World Environmental Day. Prepare a speech on “The Importance of Conservation of Nature”.

Respected teachers and my dear friends,

A warm good morning to one and all. It is my pleasure to stand here in front of you on this auspicious occasion. Although I am not an expert in public speaking. I would like to share my views about Nature.

Can we imagine a life without Nature? We can't. We live, breathe and die in Nature. Our mother earth keeps us alive by showering her love and care. But how mercilessly we destroy the same! Unscientific construction of buildings, plastic, pollution and global warming... all are increasing day by day. I think it is high time that we should unite to find a solution to protect it. We have inherited this beautiful nature from our ancestors and it is our duty to protect it for the future generation. Air, water, vegetation, forest everything need to be kept and handed over to them. Wise use of natural resources and reduced use of plastics can help us a lot in achieving our goal which is a common plea.

Let's take an oath to keep our life in harmony with nature. Let me conclude my words.

Thank You!

VIII. Prepare a character-sketch of Grandfather in the story ‘Adventures In a Banyan Tree’

Grandfather

The grandfather in the story is the eldest member of the family. He is sixty five. Yet he is active and vigorous. He loves his grandson very much. He is happy at the victory of the mongoose in the single combat. He encourages the mongoose to live in the garden. Because it would keep the snakes away. He is a man of wisdom. He has never tried to tame the mongoose because he knows that a wild mongoose is more useful than a domesticated one. When he sees the white baby squirrels he is astonished and tells that the white rat must be the father. He is also a lover of nature like the boy in the story.

IX. The grandfather and the boy were really surprised at the sight of the three baby squirrels. It was a great surprise for all and the news spread across the village. The news appeared in one of the local dailies. Prepare the likely News Report.

Three White wonders in A Banyan Tree
Staff Reporter

Dehradun, 25 June : Three baby squirrels were found in a hole in the banyan tree in one of the houses of a village in Dehradun.

In the village a grandfather and a grandson found three cute white baby squirrels in the hole in the banyan tree in the yard. The boy found them while he was searching for his grandmother's missing knitting needles. He was surprised to see the needle in the hole and when looked further, he discovered that the hole was crammed with knitting and among the wool were three baby squirrels- all of them white. Even the grandfather was seeing the white squirrels for the first time. Many people gathered to see the three little wonders of nature.

XI. The boy was so excited to see the white squirrels in the hole of the banyan tree. He decides to scribble something in his diary. What would be his diary entry?

How miraculous nature is ! With full of hidden secrets and sights! The white squirrels! I have never seen such a creature! It was really amazing. Still I can't believe my eyes. The tiny squirrels are so cute. But how is it possible? The squirrel whom I see everyday is not white. I have seen it making a nest with grandmother's knitting clothes in the banyan tree. Oh! now I remember...Grandfather has a white rat and I have seen him near the Squirrel's nest. Yes, it must be the father; Grandfather says, the rats and squirrels are related to each other and it is quite possible for them to have offsprings – in this case-white squirrels...wonderful nature...I feel so excited.

XII. After watching the deadly fight between the mongoose and the cobra the boy ran to his grandfather and explained the whole incident. What would be the likely conversation between them.

- Grandfather : Why do you look so excited?
Boy : Grandpa, I have seen something very exciting.
Grandfather : What have you seen?
Boy : I have seen a mongoose and a cobra fighting to death in the garden.
Grandfather : Where were you then?
Boy : I was in the banyan tree.
Grandfather : I think you didn't get frightened, did you?
Boy : No, I didn't get frightened.
Grandfather : Who won the battle?
Boy : The mongoose won the battle.
Grandfather : It is a useful animal. You had better not disturb it.
Boy : OK Grandpa.

XIII. The boy was thrilled at seeing the fight between the cobra and the mongoose. You may also have the same feeling. Narrate the fight-scene in your own words.

The boy was sitting on the platform half way up the tree. He saw a small mongoose and a huge black cobra fighting to death beneath the banyan tree. Both of them were skilful fighters. At first the cobra struck. But the mongoose avoided it and bit the snake on the back. In its turn the cobra darted away out of reach.

The cobra struck again and missed the object. When the cobra was weakening the mongoose vigorously took it by the snout. The cobra writhed and lashed about in a frightening manner. It even coiled itself about the mongoose but all in vain. The mongoose hung grimly on until the snake had ceased to struggle. It then smelt it and gripped around the hood and dragged it into the bushes.

Besides the boy, there were two other spectators, a myna and a crow. They tried to intervene in the fight which led to the death of the crow. The myna wisely refrained from interfering again.

XIV. Imagine the boy in the story ‘Adventures In A Banyan Tree’ decides to write a letter to his friend Arun about the deadly fight between the cobra and the mongoose. What would be the likely letter?

Dear Arun,

Hope you are enjoying your vacation there. I am doing the same here, at grandpa’s house.

Arun, I am so excited to share an incident that had happened the last day. As you know, I was sitting on the banyan tree reading some book. After sometime when I got bored I just looked around the place and happened to witness a deadly fight between a cobra and a mongoose.

Both of them were skillful fighters. At first the cobra struck. But the mongoose avoided it and bit the snake on the back. In its turn the cobra darted away out of reach.

The battle went on...When the snake was weakening the mongoose vigorously took it by the snout. The cobra even coiled itself about the mongoose but all in vain. Really it was a battle of champions...Arun. But after sometime the clever mongoose hung grimly on until the snake had ceased to struggle. It gripped around the hood and dragged it into the bushes. Anyway this is an unforgettable incident in my life.

Hope all of you are safe and healthy. My regards to all.

Yours lovingly,

The Snake and Mirror

Vaikom Muhammad Basheer

I. Read the following passages and answer the questions.

‘Has a snake ever coiled itself round any part of your body? A full-blooded cobra?’ All of us fell silent. The question came from the homeopath. The topic came up when we were discussing snakes. We listened attentively as the doctor continued with the tale.

It was a hot summer night about ten o' clock. I had my meal at the restaurant and returned to my room. I heard a noise from above as I opened the door. The sound was a familiar one. One could say that rats and I shared the room. I took out my box of matches and lighted the kerosene lamp on the table. The house was not electrified; it was a small rented room. I had just set up medical practice and my earnings were meagre. I had about sixty rupees in my suitcase. Along with some shirts and dhotis, I also possessed one solitary black coat which I was then wearing

- 1) Why did the listeners fall silent?
- 2) What was the time then ?
- 3) Where did he have his dinner?
- 4) What did he hear when he opened the door?
- 5) What is an instance of humour here?
- 6) What were his only possessions?
- 7) Why were his earnings meagre?

Answers

- 1) Because the homeopath asked a terrifying question about a cobra.
- 2) Ten O'clock.
- 3) At a restaurant
- 4) The sound of rats
- 5) He says he shared the room with rats.
- 6) Sixty rupees, some shirts, dhotis and one black coat.
- 7) Because he had just set up medical practice.

II. Read the following passages and answer the questions.

I took off my black coat, white shirt and not-so-white vest and hung them up. I opened the two windows in the room. It was an outer room with one wall facing the open yard. It had a tiled roof with long supporting gables that rested on the beam over the wall. There was no ceiling. There was a regular traffic of rats to and from the beam. I made my bed and pulled it close to the wall. I lay down but I could not sleep. I got up and went out to the veranda for a little air, but the wind god seemed to have taken time off.

I went back into the room and sat down on the chair. I opened the box beneath the table and took out a book, The Materia Medica. I opened it at the table on which stood the lamp and a large mirror; a small comb lay beside the mirror.

- 1) Why did he open the windows?
- 2) What was the regular traffic on the beams?
- 3) Why couldn't he sleep?
- 4) Which book did he take out to read?
- 5) What were the other things on the table?

Answers

- 1) To get some fresh air.
- 2) Of rats moving
- 3) Because it was too hot in the room.
- 4) The Materia Medica.
- 5) A large mirror, a lamp and a comb.

III. Read the following passages and answer the questions.

One feels tempted to look into a mirror when it is near. I took a look. In those days I was a great admirer of beauty and I believed in making myself look handsome. I was unmarried and was a doctor. I felt I had to make my presence felt. I picked up the comb and ran it through my hair and adjusted the parting so that it looked straight and neat. Again I heard that sound from above.

I took a close look at my face in the mirror. I made an important decision - I would shave daily and grow a thin moustache to look more handsome. I was, after all, a bachelor, and a doctor! I looked into the mirror and smiled. It was an attractive smile. I made another earthshaking decision. I would always keep that attractive smile on my face . . . to look more handsome. I was after all a bachelor, and a doctor too on top of it! Again came that noise from above.

I got up, lit a beedi and paced up and down the room. Then another lovely thought struck me. I would marry. I would get married to a woman doctor who had plenty of money and a good medical practice. She had to be fat; for a valid reason. If I made some silly mistake and needed to run away she should not be able to run after me and catch me!

- 1) How did the doctor want to make his presence felt in the world?
- 2) What was the important decision taken by him?
- 3) What was the earthshaking decision to be taken by the doctor?
- 4) What was the lovely thought that the doctor had in mind?

- 5) What kind of a wife did he want?
- 6) Why did the doctor want his wife to be fat?

Answers

1. He wanted the world to see him as a handsome, young bachelor.
2. He decided to shave daily and look more handsome and also to keep a thin moustache.
3. He decided to keep an attractive smile on his face, always.
4. To get married to a woman doctor who had plenty of money and a good practice.
5. A fat wife.
6. He wanted her to be fat so that she could not run after him and catch him if he made a mistake.

IV. What were the thoughts of the doctor as he sat on the chair facing the mirror?

Wow! What a handsome look. But there is something really missing. I think its my hairstyle. From today onwards, I will take a neat parting with the comb and make my hair look straight and neat. That's going to add to my handsome look. What about growing a thin moustache? People like me are so lucky to be blessed with such an attractive smile on my face. This is for sure that I am going to keep it always on my face so as to make my presence felt before the world.

V. Attempt a short paragraph on the use of contrasts to bring out humour in the story.

The story 'The snake and the mirror' is abundant with contrasting ideas which brings out striking humour in the story. The homeopathic doctor considered himself as a handsome bachelor. Moreover he also wanted to make his presence felt among others with his attractive smile and appearance. In addition to that he wanted to grow a thin moustache and maintain his good looks so that he could get a better partner.

But his real life was not as colourful as his dreams. His earnings were meager and he did not have much money.

He thinks of himself as a bachelor and doctor proudly but when the snake coils around his arm, he believes he was foolish not to have medicines in his room. He wanted a fat wife but in reality he got a thin one.

VII. Imagine that the doctor writes a letter to his friend explaining his life in the rented room.

How would the letter be?

The Burrow
Rainbow Lane
Kozhikode
6 January 2001

Dear Raju,

How are you doing? How is your job? Hope your parents are in good health. Here everything at my end is terrible. As you know, I have just started my medical practice and so my earnings are also meagre. I have not been able to save much so all I could afford with my 1000 rupee salary is a small rented room. Though the room lacks luxurious facilities, never in my wildest dreams did I expect all this. I share the room with rats who go to and from the beam above and scare me.

I just have Rs. 60 in my suitcase, along with a few shirts and dhotis and a black coat. And do you know something? I have to depend upon the wind god for a peaceful sleep as there is no fan.

There are two windows and the room faces an open yard. The room has a tiled roof and long gables and beams. The absence of a ceiling makes the room warm and I also get a clear view of my room mates, the rats. Apart from my cot, I just have a chair and a table on which I have kept a lamp, a mirror and a comb. The Materia Medica is the only book I have which helps to kill time. And if I run out of Kerosene, I may not be able to read. All these factors are stressing me out. I need to find a way out. Please do find time to write to me. Convey my regards to all at home.

You lovingly,

Ruskin

VIII. Prepare diary entry of the doctor written on the night he escaped from the rented house.

Jan 14

Thursday

Oh, what a terrible day it was! The events seem to be unbelievable. It was such a narrow escape from death.

I was actually happy, seeing my face in the mirror, enjoying my looks. I was lost in thoughts or I would have felt the snake slithering up. What a fright I got seeing the cobra on my shoulder. But thankfully I was too scared to move. But I prayed silently and God heard it. The snake's attention got diverted seeing its own reflection in the mirror and it left me.

IX. Character sketch of the Homeopath.

The homeopath was a jolly fellow with a good sense of humour and a skill in telling a tale. So, it is with precision that he describes the small rented room that he shared with rats and tells us about his meager earning and belongings. He was interested in making himself more handsome. He was also ambitious. He wanted to marry a rich, fat woman doctor. But when the snake coiled around his arm, he had the presence of mind to remain still, in spite of the pain. He was also a sociable person with many friends who helped him in times of need.

X. The incident of a cobra coiling around the homeopath's arm was reported in a daily, the next day. What would be the news report?

Doctor in dilemma

Trichur: A full blooded poisonous cobra was reported to be seen in the small rented house of a homeopath, yesterday. The house was not electrified and had rats living in it. The doctor says that the snake had coiled around his arm and that its head was just four inches away. However the doctor remained motionless and the snake slithered down and crawled on to the table on which was a mirror. The snake seemed to stare at its reflection, taken in by its own beauty. The doctor ran for his life in the darkness and returned the next day but the house was empty as it had been robbed. The snake was not to be seen anywhere.

XI. Write a paragraph on the thoughts that passed through the homeopath's mind when the snake landed on his shoulder.

Hearing a dull thud, the doctor turned to find a snake on his shoulder. But he didn't jump, tremble or cry out. He just sat holding his breath seeing the spread-out hood of the cobra, just four inches away from his face. He felt as though he had turned to stone. He could feel the presence of the creator. In his imagination he wrote 'O God' outside his little heart. He wondered what he could do when he felt the pain of the snake coiling around his arm. He thought he should not move. He also thought of whether there were medicines in the room. He considered himself a poor, foolish doctor for not keeping medicines there. When the snake turned to look in the mirror, the doctor wondered if it was admiring its own beauty, thinking of growing a moustache or using eye shadow and mascara. He also wondered about the gender of the snake as it unwound itself and left his arm.

XII. Read the conversions and answer the questions that follow:-

a. Friend : Is your wife very fat?

Doctor : She is a thin, reedy person.

- 1) What did the friend ask?
- 2) b. What was the doctor's reply?

Answer

- 1) The friend asked if the doctor's wife was very fat.
- 2) The doctor replied that she was a thin, reedy person.

V. Appreciation of the poem

‘Lines Written in Early Spring’ is a beautiful poem written by William Wordsworth. The poem celebrates the relation between man and nature. The poet becomes happy in the sights and sounds of nature and at the same time laments on what man has made of man.

The poet once sits in a grove in a very calm and relaxed mood. He hears lots of various sounds and songs. The poet rejoices in those things . At the same time, some woeful thoughts come into his mind, and he becomes pensive.

He sees the primrose and periwinkle make wreaths in the bower there. He believes that every flower enjoys the air it breathes. The birds around him express their thrill of pleasure by hopping and playing in the grove. He also notices the budding twigs spread out their tender leaves to catch the breezy air. In short, the poet sees thrilling sights, hears pleasant songs in everything he looks at in the grove, and he experiences the utmost pleasure in the world of nature.

But when he thinks of the human world, he becomes sad. What man has done to mankind as well as to nature makes him uneasy and unpleasant. The coexistence in perfect harmony is the holy plan of nature. If the divine plan of nature is pleasurable and peaceful coexistence, he wonders why man has alone moved away from this holy plan.

The poem becomes much appealing because of the simplicity of its theme and beauty of lines and the abundant use of various poetic devices. The poem follows the rhyme scheme abab. The poet uses hyperbole when he says that he heard a thousand blended notes. He addresses Nature as a person and calls it 'her'. He makes the flowers breathe the air, and makes the tender leaves of budding twigs catch the breezy air. All these are perfect examples of Personification. A beautiful instance of Alliteration can be seen in the line 'What man has made of man.'

Visual Images used in the poem add more beauty to it.

"The birds around me hopped and played",

The grove, the green bower, the flowers – primrose and periwinkle

Budding twigs.....are perfect examples of visual images.

"I heard a thousand blended notes" is an instance of auditory image.

Satyajit Ray

I. Read the passage and answer the following questions

No one can beat Hollywood when it comes to making films with animals in them. I remember films in my childhood - and there were quite a few of them – that had an Alsatian called Rin-tin- in. This dog's acting was more impressive than a human's. Later, we got to see three or four other films with a collie called Lassie. It seemed that the director could make Lassie do just about anything. These trained dogs were famous stars in their own rights, and the money they earned was no less than what a real film star got. Their owners could easily make as much as a hundred thousand rupees from just one film.

I realised how reverently these animal-actors were treated when I happened to see the shooting of a film twenty years ago in Disney Studio in Hollywood. The main character in this film was a large dog. I reached the studio to find that the shooting had not yet started; the camera man was getting the lights ready. It is customary for actors to be present when the lights are customary arranged, for they have to show the cameraman how they'll walk, or where they'll stand, in a particular shot. In the case of very famous stars, this job is done by their stand-ins. A stand-in is usually a person who is physically similar to the real star. The stars themselves arrive only when the lights are ready and it is time to take a shot.

Here, in Disney Studio, I noticed that a few actors were moving about in the set, and on one side, standing quietly, was the protagonist - the same large dog. The cameraman shouted to everyone to take their positions but the dog remained where it was. This puzzled me. Could it be that it was not required in the next shot?

Before I could ask someone, a strange thing happened. From nowhere appeared a little dwarf, followed by another man carrying a hairy dog-skin. Then, to my perfect amazement, the dwarf went down on all the fours on a chalk mark on the floor, just like an animal, and the dog-skin was draped over him. Then he crawled from one mark to another, and the cameraman got busy with the lights. It finally dawned upon me that this dwarf was paid to be the dog's stand-in!

1. How does Hollywood excel in film making?
2. Mention the names of the trained dogs who became famous stars in their own rights.
3. What is this article about?
4. What is the topic sentence in the first paragraph
5. Satyajith Ray presents films he had seen in his childhood days. Which were they?

13. Stand-ins are employed for famous film stars who physically resemble the real stars.

II. Read the passage and answer the following questions

Every animal in a Hollywood film is well-trained. It is not difficult to train a horse or a dog. But have you ever heard of trained ravens? Not just one or two, but nearly a hundred of them? Even this was made possible in Hollywood, when the creator of some of the best suspense films in the history of cinema, Alfred Hitchcock, decided to make a film called Birds. In the story, birds from all over the world start attacking humans. Hitchcock needed a variety of birds, but what was required in the largest number was ravens. Notices were placed in the press all over the United States, asking people to contact the film maker if they knew how to get hold of trained ravens.

Someone replied within a few days. He was asked to bring his birds, and he arrived with almost a hundred trained ravens. Admittedly, their training had not gone very bad. That is to say, they could not do anything that might be seen as extraordinary. But if as many as fifty ravens are told to perch quietly in a row on a specified spot, and if they obey this command instantly, isn't that pretty impressive?

Needless to say, in our own country, it is not at all easy to find trained animals, although some films have been made in Bombay and Madras that involved working with elephants, horses and tigers. Their performance did suggest that they were used to obeying commands. In Bengal, it is sometimes possible to find clever dogs, particularly police dogs which are quite intelligent. If one is prepared to be patient, it is not altogether impossible to get good performances out of them as we managed to do with Bhulo in Pather Panchali.

1. Name the director mentioned in the paragraph
2. Name the film made by Hitchcock mentioned in the passage.
3. What is the theme of the film 'Birds'
4. What did Alfred Hitchcock want?
5. What did Hitchcock do to get ravens for his film?
6. What was taught to the birds for making the film?
7. Who is Bhulo?
8. According to Satyajit Ray how should the directors be to get good performance from animal actors?

Answers

1. Alfred Hitchcock
2. 'Birds'
3. The birds from all over the world start attacking humans is the theme of the film 'Birds'
4. He wanted hundred trained ravens for the shooting of a film called 'Birds'
5. Notices were placed in the press all over the United States, asking people to contact the film maker if they knew how to get hold of trained ravens.
6. The birds were taught to perch quietly in a row on a specified spot.
7. Bhulo is an animal character in Pather Panchali. He was a clever Police dog
8. Directors should have patience.

III. Read the passage and answer the following questions

Yet, a dog might be difficult, not impossible to handle. What was one supposed to do if there was a need for a tiger in a film? We had to deal with this problem, too, when we were shooting Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne . In the film Goopy who is banished by the king wanders in the forest, meets Bagha who is also banished. They see a tiger and freeze. But the tiger simply walks about in the forest, without paying them the slightest attention.

Having thought of the scene, I simply had to shoot it. But where were we going to find a tiger? The obvious thing to do was to look in a circus since they were likely to have trained animals.

As a matter of fact, one called Bharat Circus was visiting Calcutta at the time, holding shows in Marcus Square. We sent someone to make an appointment with its Tamil manager and then went to meet him one morning. He greeted us warmly and ordered South Indian coffee for us. The manager heard the reason for our visit, then sent for one Mr Thorat. He turned out to be the ringmaster. He, too, was a South Indian, very well built, with features somewhat like those of a Nepali. He was perhaps no more than forty. He showed us an old scar on his forearm, which had been caused by a tiger.

We told him what we wanted. The shooting was taking place near Shiuri in Birbhoom. We wanted to show a tiger in a thick bamboo grove. All the animal was required to do was come out of the bamboo grove into an open space, pace gently for a while, look at the camera if possible, and then go back. Could a tiger from Bharat Circus do this job? Mr Thorat nodded. 'How long will you need it for?' asked the manager. 'Perhaps a couple of hours for the shooting,' I replied. 'But that would be in addition to the time it'll take to travel to and from Shiuri.' On being told that the travel itself should take no more than two days, the manager agreed to put the tiger in its cage and send it in a lorry. He invited us to take a look at the tiger. Do you think it's going to be easy to set the animal free in the bamboo grove?' I couldn't help asking. What! Were all our plans going to go down the drain? How could we let the tiger's trainer be seen with the animal? How could Goopy and Bagha be petrified with fear if the supposedly ferocious animal was accompanied by a man? No, we could not allow that to happen.

1. Whom did Ray approach to get the tiger for his film Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne?
2. Who is Mr. Thorat?
3. What did Ray Want?
4. Where was the shooting taking place?
5. What was the tiger supposed to do?

Answers

1. The manager of Bharat Circus company
2. Mr. Thorat was a ringmaster. He was a South Indian. He was very well built and has features somewhat like those of a Nepali. He was in his forties. He has an old Scar on his forearm which had been caused by a tiger.
3. Ray wanted a tiger for the shooting of the film Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne
4. Shiuri in Birbhoom
5. The tiger had to come out of the bamboo grove into an open space gently for a while, look at the camera if possible and then go back.

IV. Read the passage and answer the following questions

Mr. Thorat found a solution. 'I'll tie a wire round the tiger's neck. It will be thin, but strong.' If the wire was thin enough, perhaps it would remain invisible to the camera. But it was likely that the hair on the tiger's neck would be flattened by the wire, which would give the whole thing away. 'What if we found a collar made of tiger skin, fixed the wire to this collar and then tied it round the tiger's neck?' I said.

In a village called Notun Gram we found a suitable bamboo grove to film the first meeting between Goopy and Bagha and the appearance of the tiger. Mr Thorat reached the shooting location with the tiger. There were about twenty five people in the location. A few local people took our permission to go with us to watch how we tackled the tiger. The cage on the lorry was covered. When the cover was removed we were surprised to see not one, but two well-fed and robust tigers. We mounted the camera on its tripod that it faced the bamboo grove. The audience was instructed to get behind the camera and to stand as far back as possible. We had to stay relatively close to the bamboo grove, and Goopy and Bagha too, had to be within yards of the camera, for it was necessary to have at least one shot that showed them together with the tiger.

Mr Thorat's men had fixed a five foot iron rod to the ground, about thirty feet from the area where the tiger was supposed to take a walk. They took a thin, long wire and fixed one end to the collar made of tiger-skin that the tiger was already wearing. The other end was tied firmly to the visible portion of the iron rod. The door of one of the cages was unfastened and Mr Thorat called out to the tiger. It responded almost at once and sprang out of its cage to land on the open space outside. What followed was totally unexpected. One look at Mr Thorat's startled and helpless face told us that he was as taken aback as the rest of us. Instead of walking sedately in a dignified manner, the tiger started prancing tremendous enthusiasm. It leapt, it jumped, it rolled about, dragging its poor trainer who was desperately clutching the wire tied to the tiger's collar in a futile attempt to bring it under control. We stood around foolishly, watching a new and strange kind of circus which we were getting to see for free! The camera was still standing on its three legs, staring into the wood, but the tiger was showing no sign of making its way there.

1. What was Mr. Thorat's suggestion to control the tiger?
2. Why should the wire be thin? What was the solution found?
3. Where was the setting for the shooting of the film?
4. How were the tigers brought to the location?
5. How many people crowded to see the shooting?
6. Who were the characters in the film?
7. What was the scene?
8. Why was Ray surprised when the cover of the cage was removed?
9. Why did Mr. Thorat bring two tigers instead of one ?
10. What were the precautions that the crew had made?
11. Something unexpected happened. What was it?

Answers

1. Mr Thorat suggested tying a thin strong wire round the tiger's neck.
2. If the wire was thin enough, it would remain invisible to the camera. The solution was to make a collar made of tiger skin and fix the wire to the collar.
3. In a village called Notun Gram.
4. The tiger was put in a cage and brought it in a lorry.
5. There were about twenty five people on the location
6. Goopy, Bagha and the tiger
7. The first meeting of Goopy, Bagha and the tiger.
8. There were two tigers instead of one.
9. If the First tiger couldn't follow the instructions, he could use the second one.
10. The crew fixed the end of a wire to the collar which the tiger was wearing and the other end was tied to a strong iron rod fixed on the ground.
11. When the tiger came out of the cage and it behaved frantically. It started to leap, roll and jump, dragging the trainer. The trainer couldn't control the tiger.

V. Read the passage and answer the following questions

Once the tiger had calmed down, we managed to take the few shots we needed. This should have been the end of the story. But, when we returned to Calcutta and looked at the scenes with the tiger, we realised that the camera had failed to work properly. The shots were too dark, so much so that the tiger was merging almost completely with the background of the trees and leaves. We had to shoot the scenes all over again. We spoke to Mr Thorat and he agreed to give it another go. We found another bamboo grove closer to Calcutta in a village called Boral. The lorry arrived once more, with Mr Thorat, the tiger, the steel wire, the special collar and the iron rod. And with the lorry came the whole village. We told the villagers that they should stand at a distance of seventy feet. No one paid any attention to what they were told. The entire crowd moved as close to the camera as they could. We could not afford to waste any more time explaining and arguing. So we got the camera ready and signalled to Mr Thorat.

He opened the door of the cage. The instant the door opened with a clang, our tiger emerged with a loud roar, and charged straight at the villagers gathered behind the camera. The crowd, consisting of about a hundred and fifty people, melted away as if by magic. After that great burst of energy, the tiger calmed down very quickly. Like an obedient child, it walked over to the spot we had chosen, paced about quietly as it was led back to its trainer. required to, and then ambled back to its trainer. Even the camera behaved this time, which we realised two days later, when we returned to Calcutta and saw the scenes we had shot.

1. What made them shoot the scene again?
2. When did they understand that the camera had failed to work properly?
3. Which was the new location?
4. What did the crew members ask the villagers to do?
5. What was the magic performed by the tiger?
6. What did the tiger do after the initial burst of energy?
7. How did the camera perform this time?

Answers

1. The camera had failed to work properly and the shots were dark. Tiger was merging almost completely with the background of the trees and leaves.
2. They understood that all their efforts went in vain when they reached Calcutta.
3. The new location was in a bamboo grove closer to Calcutta in a village called Boral .
4. They told the villagers that they should stand at a distance of seventy feet.
5. The moment the door was opened the tiger charged straight at the villagers and all of them melted away by the tiger's magic.
6. After the initial burst of energy the tiger calmed down and obeyed the instructions.
7. The camera behaved well this time.

Dear Gopalakrishnan Sir,

How are you? Hope you are fine. It has been a long time since we communicated last. You may be busy with films. I write this letter to tell you about a wonderful experience I had recently. I needed a tiger for my film 'Goopy gyne Bagha Byne' I went to Bharat circus in Calcutta for getting a tiger for shooting. The manager of the circus company arranged the ring-master Mr.Thorat to help us Mr.Thorat agreed to give a trained tiger. He brought the tiger in a lorry.

The shooting was arranged in a village called Noturn Gram. When the door was opened, the tiger began to roll, jump and leap. The trainer couldn't control the tiger. After sometime we managed to take a few shots. When we reached Calcutta, we realized that the Camera had failed to work. We had to shoot the scenes again. This time I decided to shoot in a village called Boral. But the tiger jumped out with a loud roar and came to the front of the camera. The people who were standing next to the camera disappeared as if by magic. I was able to shoot correctly this time. I hope that the film will be a great success.

Sir,

Sub: Providing a tiger for shooting.

We are engaged in producing new film "Goopy Gyne Bagha Byne". The shooting site is set in Shiuri in Birbhoom. In the story, a tiger plays a dominant role. We learned that your company is holding shows in Marcus Square with tigers. It would be a great help if you could provide a trained tiger for the shooting.

Hope you will co operate in our new venture

Satyajit Ray.

XII. Attempt a character Sketch of Mr. Thorat.

Mr. Thorat was the ring-master in Bharat Circus. He was a South Indian. He was well built. He had features somewhat like those of a Nepali. He was more than forty. He had an old scar on his forearm which was caused by a tiger. He was not sure about the success of the plan of shooting a scene with a tiger. He made a collar out of tiger skin and tied a wire to it, to control the tiger. He brought two tigers for the shooting instead of one.

XIII. Prepare the diary of Satyajit Ray after the successful shooting of the scene with a tiger.

Monday

It was an unforgettable day in my life. How relieved am I now! If I had failed in my attempt to shoot the film I would have stopped it. I can't imagine that.....The shooting was very difficult. Mr. Thorat helped me a lot. If he was not there, I would not be able to complete it. He was really helpful. How lucky we were! After all, we succeeded in shooting the film. Everyone praised us. Anyway it was a great hit. It really was a memorable day in my life.

THE BEST INVESTMENT I EVER MADE

Archibald Joseph Cronin

I. Read the following paragraph from the story 'The Best Investment I ever Made' and answer the questions

On the second day, out from New York, while making the round of the promenade deck, I suddenly became aware that one of the passengers was watching me closely, following me with his gaze every time I passed. I wanted to rest, to avoid the tedium of casual and importunate ship-board contacts. I gave no sign of having noticed the man.

Yet there was nothing importunate about him. On the contrary, he seemed affected by a troubled, rather touching diffidence. He was in his early 40s, rather short in build, with a fair complexion and clear blue eyes. His thin hair had begun to recede from his forehead. His dark suit, sober tie and rimless spectacles gave evidence of a serious and reserved disposition. At this point the bugle sounded for dinner, and I went below.

1. Who are the main characters mentioned in this passage?
2. Where did they start the journey from?
3. Identify the word which means 'a public place for walking' from the passage.
4. What did the author notice while making the round of promenade deck?
5. Which expression shows that the fellow traveller is watching the narrator?
6. Find out the synonym of the word 'boredom' from the passage.
7. Did the narrator like importunate contacts?
8. Pick out the word from the passage which means 'asking for many things many times in a way that is annoying'
9. Which sentence tells that narrator did not like importunate contacts?
10. Why did the author give no sign of having noticed the man?
11. What did the narrator do when he notice the stranger looking at him?
12. Find out the antonym of the word 'confidence ' from the passage?
13. How did the narrator describe the man?

II. Read the following paragraph from the story 'The Best Investment I ever Made' and answer the questions

On the following forenoon, I again observed my fellow voyager watching me earnestly from his deck chair. Now a lady was with him, obviously his wife. The situation by this time had begun to intrigue me. I discovered from my steward that they were Mr and Mrs John S_ from a small suburb of London. When another day passed without event, I began to feel certain that Mr S_ would remain too shy to carry out his obvious desire to approach me. However, on our final evening at sea Mrs S_ decided the matter. With a firm pressure on his hand and a whispered word in his ear, she urged her husband towards me as I passed along the deck.

Excuse me, Doctor, I wonder if I might introduce myself.' He spoke almost breathlessly, offering me the visiting card he held in his hand and studying my face to see if the name meant anything to me. Then, as it plainly did not, he went on with the same awkwardness. 'If you could spare a few minutes... my wife and I would like to have a word with you.'

A moment later I was occupying the vacant chair beside them. Haltingly he told me that this had been their first visit to America. It was not entirely a holiday trip. They had been making a tour of the New England states, inspecting many of the summer recreational camps for young people there. Afterwards, they had visited settlement houses in New York and other cities to study the methods employed in dealing with cases of backward, maladjusted and delinquent youth.

1. What made the narrator notice the fellow voyager the next day?
2. Pick out the word from the passage which means 'to make a person very interested to know about something'.
3. What information did the steward give the doctor about the man?

III. III. Read the following paragraph from the story 'The Best Investment I ever Made' and answer the questions

I was a young doctor at the time and had just set up a practice in a working-class district of London. On a foggy November night, towards one o'clock, I was awakened by a loud banging on the door. Hurriedly, I threw on some clothes and went downstairs. It was a sergeant of police, in dripping helmet and cape, mistily outlined on the doorstep. A suicide case, he told me abruptly, in the lodgings around the corner-I had better come at once. We walked the short distance in silence, even our footsteps muffled by the fog, and turned into the narrow entrance of an old building. As we mounted the creaking staircase, my nostrils were stung by the sick-sweet odour of illuminating gas. On the upper storey the agitated landlady showed us to a bare little attic where, stretched on a narrow bed, lay the body of a young man.

1. Who did bang the door?
2. Why did Sergeant come to meet A. J. Cronin?
3. Where was the suicide attempt made?
4. Where was the young doctor practising?
5. What smell did Dr. Cronin get while mounting the staircase of the old building?
6. Identify the word from the passage which means 'to make a sound less clear'.
7. Find out one word of 'a room or space just below the roof of a house'.

IV. Read the following paragraph from the story 'The Best Investment I ever Made' and answer the questions

Although apparently lifeless, there remained the barest chance that the youth was not quite beyond recall. With the sergeant's help, I began the work of resuscitation. For an entire hour we laboured without success. Despite our most strenuous exertions, it appeared useless. Then, as we were about to give up, completely exhausted, there broke from the patient a shallow, convulsive gasp. Half an hour of redoubled efforts and we had the youth sitting up, gazing at us dazedly. Slowly he seemed to be realizing the horror of his situation.

As he regained his strength, he told us his story. His parents were dead. An uncle had found him a position as clerk in a London solicitor's office. He had been in the city only six months. Utterly friendless, he had fallen victim to the loose society of the streets, had made bad companions and like a young fool, eager to taste pleasure far beyond his means, had begun to bet on horses. Soon he had lost all his small savings, had pledged his belongings and owed the book-maker a disastrous amount. In an effort to recoup, he had taken a sum of money from the office safe for a final gamble that, he was assured, was certain to win. But this last resort had failed. Terrified of the prosecution that must follow, prosecution sick at heart, sunk in despair, he had shut himself in his room and turned on the gas.

1. What did the doctor do to save the life of the young man?
2. Did the young man die?
3. What did the young man tell doctor about him when regained his consciousness?
4. Identify the word which means 'the act of bringing someone back to consciousness'.
5. How long did they do the work of resuscitation?
6. What sign gave the doctor a hope?
7. What happened after half an hour of effort?
8. Where was the young man working?
9. Who helped him to find a job?
10. How long did he work in the solicitor's office?
11. How did he lose his money?
12. What did he do to gain back his money?
13. Where did he get the money for final gambling?
14. Did he succeed in the final gamble?
15. Why did the young man commit suicide?

16. Pick out the word from the passage which means 'to get back an amount of money that you have spent or lost'.

V. Read the following paragraph from the story 'The Best Investment I ever Made' and answer the questions

A long bar of silence throbbed in the little attic when he concluded this halting confession. Then, gruffly, the sergeant asked how much he had stolen. Seven pounds ten shillings - the answer sounded pitiful. For this paltry sum he had almost thrown away his life.

There was a pause. The three of us, the sergeant, the landlady and me, as the sole witnesses of the near tragedy, had the same unspoken thought in our minds. We decided to give the young man a fresh start.

The sergeant, at considerable risk to his job, resolved to make no report upon the case, so that no court proceedings would result. The landlady offered a month's free board until he should get upon his feet again. While I, making perhaps the least contribution, came forward with seven pounds ten shillings for him to put back in the office safe.

The ship moved on through the still darkness of the night. There was no need of speech. With a tender gesture Mrs S had taken her husband's hand. And as we sat in silence, I could not but reflect that it was the best investment I had made in my life. It had paid me no dividends in worldly goods, but had turned out to be immensely profitable. It stood out against all the bad investments I had made throughout the years-those foolish speculations for material gain, producing only anxiety, disappointment and frustration.

1. How much had the young man stolen from the office safe?
2. Who were the witnesses of the tragedy?
3. Pick out a word from the passage which means 'in a rough and unfriendly manner'.
4. What did they decide?
5. How did the sergeant help him?
6. what did the landlady do to help him?
7. What was the doctor's contribution?
8. What was the unspoken thought in the minds of the three?
9. Complete the sentence suitably
 - a. If the sergeant file the case,.....
 - b. If the sergeant filed the case,.....
 - c. If the sergeant had filed the case,.....
10. Why does the author say that it was the best investment he had ever made?

5. The sergeant resolved to make no report upon the case.
6. The landlady offered a month's free board until he regain his health.
7. The doctor gave him the money to put back in the safe.
8. To give the young man a fresh start.
9.
 - a. the young man will be arrested.
 - b. the young man would be arrested.
 - c. the young man would have been arrested.
10. The author's timely action helped the man to change his bad ways.

VI. Attempt a CHARACTER SKETCH of Mr. John, the solicitor, in 'The Best Investment I Ever Made'.

Mr. John was a successful solicitor for the past fifteen years. Moreover he was a director of a charitable organization, devoted to the rehabilitation of girls and boys from city slums. He visited settlement houses in New York and other cities, to study the methods employed with backward, maladjusted and delinquent youth. He was always assisted by his wife. He took derelict adolescents from juvenile courts and placed them in healthy environment. They were given training in vocations to lead a happy life. He too had such a past life, which acted as an inspiration. He too was a gambler, who had even robbed money from his office safe. When he lost it, he tried to commit suicide. All the past experiences helped him pave the way for the upliftment of the delinquent youth. All the traumas which he faced in his life made him a rescuer for the youth. He turned them to good and useful citizens, which was indeed a great responsibility to the society.

VII. Attempt a CHARACTER SKETCH of the doctor in the story 'The Best Investment I Ever Made'.

The doctor in the story The Best Investment I Ever Made is a peculiar character. He seems to be a little introvert and prefers not to befriend people during his journeys which is evident from the way he avoids the looks of Mr. John when he tries to get the doctor's attention. But he is a good human being. He stayed positive when he tried to the young man's life after that suicide attempt. And when there was a decision to help the young man he gave the boy money to be put back in the office safe. The doctor after sowing the seeds of virtue in the mind of the man leaves the scene and resumes his life's journey. And at last when he understands the value of his deed he says that it was the best investment he ever made in his life.

VIII. Attempt a CHARACTER SKETCH of the wife of Mr. John in the story 'The Best Investment I Ever Made'.

The wife of Mr. John in the story 'The Best Investment I Ever Made' is a loving and caring wife who stands with her husband. She became his partner in dealing with the backward, maladjusted and delinquent youth. When he told her the turning point in his life she starts working with him and in 15 years they could save hundreds of youngsters and their families. She travels with him in his voluntary service for youth welfare. It would have become difficult for Mr. John to pick derelict adolescents from the juvenile courts and without her this would have been lot more for Mr. John.

IX. Make an imaginary DIARY entry made by the young man, on the day he was saved from death.

London

14 -03-1924, Wednesday

Oh! The blackest Wednesday of my life. Why did I do so? What had come over me? Really, a foolish decision indeed! If they had not come, I would have been dead. Look at them how good all the three of them were. The sergeant..... I can't imagine, he.... Did not register a case, and the Land lady one month's boarding free..... how will I thank her. And that doctor he too..... gave me that sum which I took from the safe. How good were they all to me. And I foolish no more betting on horses... Ah! What a relief now, I have to start my life new and happy and no gambling. May Lord bless all three of them. Feeling sleepy.....

OR

A. J. Cronin never thought that he would meet that young man again who he had saved from death twenty five years ago. It was a boosting experience for him to know how the young man was changed over the time. Imagine that he writes about the meeting in his DIARY. What would be the likely diary entry.

28 December

Monday, 10 pm

How awesome the day was! I just could not believe myself. I was very much excited. It was all messed up in the beginning. The couple staring at me made my nerves wreck. But a couple of days later I understood that they were eager to talk with me. What began as a very usual conversation took a twist. I was taken down the memory lane. With much hesitation he revealed that I was the doctor who had given him a new life. I could not believe my eyes. Twenty five years back I had rescued him from a tragedy and now he is before me, a vibrant young man ready to head societal missions. My eyes welled up. I never knew that I would live up to witness such a great transformation. May God bless him to live long and continue changing other's lives.

19 May

Monday 10 PM

Today was the most unexpected day in my life. After a long gap of 25 years I was blessed to meet my saviour. I was so happy that I was too shy to approach him. I hesitated several times. But my wife insisted me. Rather she took the initiative to break the ice. I spoke everything with much intensity. He was listening to us. I could never believe what was happening. I saw Mr. Cronin's face blooming up. Yes. It was a dream come true moment for me. I really wanted to thank him for giving me this most beautiful life. We sat still because I felt I have no words left in me to express my gratitude. Oh God! Give this wonderful man a long and peaceful life.

XII. DIARY of A. J. Cronin/ The Sergeant/ Landlady (after saving the Young man Mr. John from Suicide attempt)

5 August

Friday

Oh! an unforgettable day. Today I feel my life has got a new meaning. So happy that I could save the young man. Poor fellow..He tried to end himself for seven pounds ten shillings. He should never have forgotten that life on earth is the most valuable gift. How pitiful is his condition! Without work or money. Can I help him? Yes I shall try my level best. Why are these young men doing all these? Addicted to drugs and lost in bad company they live without any commitments to the society. We have to do something to save these people. Anyway thank god for bringing me here on time.

XIII. The young man felt happy after regaining his life from the suicide attempt. Prepare a DIARY that he would have written that day.

OR

The young man in the anecdote 'The best Investment I Ever Made' has a wonderful escape from death. Later after his recovery, he writes down his feelings in his diary. Prepare the likely DIARY entry.

Thank God. I got my life back. How silly I was trying to kill myself only for seven pounds ten shillings. Now I realize the value of god-gifted life. I am sure the doctor, the sergeant and the landlady are the agents of God. What if they hadn't come on time? I just cannot think. It is all because of my uncontrolled and lavish life. I wasted everything in vain. I should thank the landlady for allowing me to stay here without rent. The sergeant is also great for not reporting my case. But the doctor has given me a rebirth. I have learnt a lesson. Here after my life is for people like me who need to be healed in mind and body.

XIV. A J Cronin was extremely happy by the incident he had in the ship. He writes a letter to his friend. Prepare a similar LETTER.

Dublin

10.10.1924

Dear George,

I am really happy to write this letter to you. Last week during my journey to America, I came across a very special couple on board. I was a little irritated at their staring initially, but later I came to know that they were very eager to talk with me. I was slowly getting attracted to them and finally I gave in. With much hesitation they told me about the projects they are into.

Repeatedly he asked me if I remembered him. The man reminded me of an incident that took place a few years back. I saved the life of a young man, who had tried to commit suicide. He had stolen money to pay his debts due to his wayward life. I gave him the money to repay his debts so that he could begin his life afresh. It took me some time to realize that the same young man stood before me as a transformed guy. A small investment that I made on that man has transformed him and through him hundreds of youngsters and their families were saved. I feel that it was the best investment that I have ever made in my life. Hope you would feel the same reading this letter. Convey my love and regards to everyone.

Yours lovingly

Cronin

XV. Write a NEWSPAPER REPORT on the attempted suicide of the young man.

CLERK ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Staff Reporter, London: A young man aged 21 attempted suicide in a suburb in London. The land lady found the man unconscious from the nauseating smell that emerged from cooking gas. When contacted with the doctor, he was brought back to life after one hour of strenuous resuscitation. He said he robbed seven pounds shillings from the office safe. Addicted to gambling and after suffering heavy loss financially, and terrified of prosecution and ill fame, the man attempted so. The man is in observation in the City Hospital, and is said to be out of danger.

XVI. The transformation of Mr. John appears in a newspaper. Prepare a NEWSPAPER REPORT on the same.

A PRICELESS INVESTMENT

Staff Reporter, Cardross: The crew and the shipmates on board a ship here narrated the story of a young man named Mr. John and his unbelievable transformation. He was a suicide survivor 25 years before and was miraculously saved by A. J. Cronin. He was also given the money to repay his debts by the kind doctor. Overwhelmed by the kindness bestowed on him by a stranger, the young man had undergone a quick attitude change. He gave up his past lifestyles and has become a real contributor to the society. He now works as a social worker specializing on maladjusted and delinquent youth. He was given a warm reception on board the ship along with A J Cronin.

XVII. Prepare a NEWS PAPER REPORT about Mr. and Mrs. John and the work that they are doing.

A REBIRTH TO REGAIN LIVES

Staff Reporter, New York: The world of selfishness is bowing before Mr. and Mrs. John, a couple who have chosen to live for others. We can frequently see them in the summer recreational camps for young people. They visit settlement houses to study the methods to deal with backward maladjusted youth. They have been offering selfless service for 15 years in the field of youth welfare. Professionally Mr. John is a solicitor but as the director of charitable institutions his life is devoted to the welfare of boys and girls from the slums. They not only rescue them but also give training in handicraft, rehabilitate them and bring them back to life. It is reported that Mr John got inspiration from a doctor who once saved his life after a suicidal attempt. Hearing about this noble work many eminent persons have offered their support to the mission.

XVIII. A short function to congratulate Mr. John is going to be held in the ship. You are one of the shipmates who are asked to deliver a SPEECH. Attempt a similar speech.

The most respected writer A J Cronin, the hero of the day Mr. John, his wife, ladies and gentlemen,

This is a very special moment for all of us because as we know we are gathered here for a special reason. The couple sitting just in front of us is really on a mission. Their purpose of this voyage is different from ours. Now let me tell you that we are going to witness a rare moment in the life of these wonderful people. We are always proud of doing this and that but let me confess, that this achievement is beyond everyone's cup. Being humane and sympathetic may sometimes sound easier, but changing someone's life is way tough. Mr. A. J. Cronin has proved that our values are still alive. Twenty five years back he has helped this young man and now he is an accomplished social worker who wholeheartedly embarked on a mission of taking care of maladjusted and delinquent youth.

At this blessed moment I take full liberty to congratulate these outstanding people for their endeavours. I extend my heartfelt wishes to Mr. A. J. Cronin as well. Once again I wish Mr. John, the real hero for becoming a model to be emulated for the generations to come. Thank you everyone for a memorable day.

XXIX. Based on the lesson 'The Best Investment I Ever Made'. Write a SPEECH on the grave issue of drugs and its use among youth.

Respected teachers and my dear friends,

Today I am before you to express my deep concern over the grave issue of drugs and its use specially among youth. I know pretty well that our school campus has never been a hub for drug dealers and users. But at the same time I am too concerned about the condition of thousands of boys and girls who fall victim to this drug monster.

Drugs and addiction continue to plague the conscience of our society even at this era where people boast of novel inventions and newer gadgets that make life more comfortable. My dear friends, let me take you to the grim world of those people who have lost everything they value due to drug addiction. Drugs are those stimulants when used at a milder level increases up your energies, and yet a little more of it makes one dull and passive and withdrawn. A greater amount may lead eventually to one's death. Drugs, when mixed with blood controls the whole body. Brain seems to dysfunction and the person may not be able to fulfill even his daily chores. Right and wrong, day and night are alike to them. Once a person becomes addictive, his demand for drugs increases and ends up in searching for more. He reaches a state where he feels he couldn't survive without drugs. Drugs are introduced mostly by friends and relatives. It's an invitation that tests one's integrity, faith, bravery and sometimes it would come as a temporary solution to ease out a troubled mental state.

So selecting friends is far more important. Many of the addicts said that it was their friends who urged them to taste it. Some did it for adventure. In both cases a victim ends up in losing his family, relationship, and his future altogether.

The de-addiction centres help them to overcome from the clutches of drugs. But it is also a very difficult task. It takes months and in some cases years to get cured from drug addiction. The societal attitude towards the drug addicts remain unchanged even after they come back to normalcy. They are denied decent jobs and aren't welcome at a joyous function. As a result they tend to become withdrawn and show signs of psychic preoccupations. Some commit suicide and others turn anti-socials. Very few, with the love and assurance showered on them by their friends and family survive. We have learned the story of a young man who fell into bad company which led him to commit suicide but was fortunately saved by Cronin. It was the timely advice and interference of the doctor that changed his mind. He became a contributing member of the society in a short span of time.

Hence my dear friends, I would like to warn you never to take this fatal mistake of playing with your life. There may be thousands of friends but finally it's your body that you are going to assault. If you enjoyed, you also have to endure the pains. There is only one life, remember no drugs have ever solved any of men's problems. Prevention is always better than cure.

Thank you for your patient listening.

XX. A. J. Cronin noticed a man staring at him for long. Prepare a CONVERSATION between him and the couple.

Mr. John : Excuse me doctor, may I introduce myself? Can you spare a few minutes with me?

A. J. Cronin : I think we are meeting for the first time.

Mr. John : Yes. Please have a look at my visiting card.

A. J. Cronin : Oh ! OK. Sorry I can't recollect you.

Mrs. John : This is our first visit to U.S. We are here to visit camps for young people.

A. J. Cronin : Oh great ! How long have you been working in the field of youth welfare?

Mr. John : 15 years. I am a solicitor but more interested in the charitable organization for boys and girls from the slums.

A. J. Cronin : What kind of work are you doing here?

Mr. John : We try to heal the maladjusted youth and rehabilitate them.

A. J. Cronin : Your work is really praise worthy. What brought you to this field?

Mr. John : It is you sir who brought me back to life. My life is your gift.

A. J. Cronin : Me? But how?

Mr John : I am the same person whom you saved years ago from a suicide.

A. J. Cronin : My God ! It's you? I am really happy to see you again.

XXI. One night A. J. CRONIN was suddenly awakened by a sergeant. Prepare a CONVERSATION between A . J. Cronin and the sergeant of police.

OR

“On a foggy November night, towards one o'clock, I was awakened by a loud banging on the door”. Imagine and write the CONVERSATION the sergeant and the doctor would make on the occasion.

Cronin : Who is knocking there?

Sergeant : Mr. Cronin, I am the sergeant of police. Sorry to disturb you.

Cronin : Its OK. But what brought you here?

Sergeant : There is a suicide case in one of the lodgings around the corner.

Cronin : Who is it?

Sergeant : A young man.

Cronin : Has he been hospitalized?

Sergeant : No sir. He is still there.

Cronin : What is his condition now?

Sergeant : I think he is sinking.

Cronin : Then we shall hurry up.

XXII. Prepare CONVERSATION between A. J. Cronin and the young man after his coming back to life.

Young man : I am so thankful to you sir for rescuing me.

A J Cronin : Thank God. But why did you do this?

Young man : I had no other way. I had lost everything.

A J Cronin : What happened to you?
Young man : After my parent's death I was working as a clerk. Then I started to be in bad company, betting on horses, living lavishly.
A J Cronin : So you lost your wealth, didn't you?
Young man : Yes. So I took a sum of money from the office safe for gambling.
A J Cronin : You shouldn't have done it. Did you win?
Young man : No. I lost it and was afraid of the punishment. So I decided to commit suicide.
A J Cronin : Poor fellow. Don't worry. We can find a solution, but promise you won't repeat it.
Young man : Sure sir. I have learned the value of life.

XXIII. Prepare a WRITE UP on the anecdote 'Best Investment I Ever Made' by A. J. Cronin.

Once A. J. Cronin , the famous Scottish novelist and Physician was travelling by a ship on his way from New York. Then he saw a man in his early forties and his wife. From his appearance Cronin assumed that he was a serious character. Mr. John wanted to speak to Cronin. But he was too shy to approach him. At last, his wife pushed him forward and he spoke to Cronin.

He told Cronin that he visited settlement houses in New York and other cities to study the methods of dealing with the backward, maladjusted and delinquent youth. He also told that he was a solicitor and also director of a charitable organization. Cronin understood from their talk they took adolescents from juvenile courts, placed them in healthy environment to heal them in mind and body. And they were sent back into the world with new aspirations and hopes. Cronin asked him what had directed his life into that channel. At this he revealed his story when he was saved by A. J. Cronin. Cronin had then started medical practice in a working class district of London. One November night a sergeant of police called him to attend a suicide case. They reached the lodge and learned that a young man had turned on the gas. When Cronin saw the man he was almost lifeless. He and the sergeant tried for about an hour and saved the man.

He told that his parents were dead, and his uncle found him a job as a solicitor's clerk. Being friendless, he fell a victim to the loose society and made bad companions. He began to bet on horses and lost his savings. His debts increased. To recoup them he had taken a sum of money from the office safe for gambling. But that resort too failed. Afraid of prosecution and dishonour he sank in despair and shut himself in a room and turned the gas.

Hearing this story, Cronin, the land lady and the sergeant decided to help that youth. Cronin gave him seven pounds, ten shillings to put back in the office safe. The sergeant promised not to report the case and land lady offered a month's free boarding.

It was that help which became a turning point in the young man's life and changed him. So Mr. Cronin confesses to us that, it was the best investment he had made in his life. All other investments were foolish and only for material benefits. This anecdote has a great message. A wise and a gentle help made by the three people made a great impact in a man's life. He later became a messiah sent by lord in making the loose life of many children into worthy ones. Also that some selfless helps made by others can perform miracles and can change a human life positively.

XXIV. Prepare a WRITE UP on how far the title is appropriate to the story 'Best Investment I Ever Made' ?

The Best Investment I Ever Made is penned by the much celebrated Scottish writer A. J. Cronin. Cronin shares one of his personal experiences with the readers through this story. The title of the story is 'The Best Investment I Ever Made'. Usually we associate material gain with the word investment, obviously an underlying hope of profit lingers with the term investment and it may mean different things to different people. But the story by Cronin has a differently conceived meaning because it wasn't anything related with money or profit. The author's personal integrity and the values he had imbibed right from the beginning of his life made him what he was.

A doctor by profession, he rescued a suicide survivor and took pity on him. He helped the victim with the money he needed to repay his debts. The doctor after sowing the seeds of virtue in the mind of the man leaves the scene and resumes his life's journey little knowing about the transformation he had made in the mind of the young man. The once wayward young man had undergone a drastic change in his attitude and lifestyle that he had really become a contributing member of the society. The money Cronin had put in was to repay the debts the young man had. But it had really opened his otherwise blind eyes. The man had become an active social worker specializing on maladjusted and delinquent youth.

The author was happy beyond words because this was an investment that he could never have won even if he had put lakhs of money into share markets. So the title is too apt.

XXV. The best investment in life is not money but values. Prepare a WRITE UP substantiating this view with the help of the story The Best Investment I Ever Made by A. J. Cronin.

THE VALUABLE INVESTMENT

A J Cronin, a well-known writer of novels, inspires us with a touching story “The Best Investment I Ever Made”. Once while he was travelling in a ship he found a man watching him anxiously many times. At first he felt annoyed. Later the couple came to him and introduced themselves as Mr. and Mrs. John. They have been working among derelict youth for 15 years, rehabilitating them and bringing them back to life. He became interested in the story. Then they told him that he was the inspiration for them. They reminded him of an incident that happened years ago. Years ago at midnight he was woken up from sleep by a Sergeant who came to him to inform about a suicide case in a nearby lodging. When he reached there the room was filled with the smell of a gas. At first he thought he was dead. Any way with the sergeant’s help he tried to revive him to consciousness. After half an hour of redoubled efforts they succeeded in rescuing him. He told them that he was a clerk in an office. Lost in bad company and luxuries he had wasted all his wealth. He took money from the office for gambling which he couldn't replace. Being desperate he tried to commit suicide.

A. J. Cronin learnt from him that he had taken only seven pounds and ten shillings. So he gave him that money, the Sergeant promised not to report the case and the landlady offered one month's free lodging till he got a new job. Thus the young man regained his life. He had given him only a small amount but the investment was more than that. He had given him a rebirth which the young man utilized for giving rebirth to many young men. Mr John has realized from his own experience that life on earth is the most valuable of god's gifts. This he imparts to thousands of youth. Here investment is also the values we imbibe in our lives, that would remain the best for ever. So A. J. Cronin's statement is really meaningful and valid.

XXVI. Imagine the doctor is reporting the suicide incident to his friends. Prepare the NARRATIVE.

UNFORGETTABLE INCIDENT

Today is an unforgettable day in my life. While I was sleeping at night a Sergeant came to me and informed me about a suicide case in a nearby lodging. We hurried to the spot. When I reached there the room was filled with the smell of a gas. I found a young man lying on a narrow bed. At first I thought he was dead. Any way with the sergeant’s help I tried to revive him to consciousness. But I found it was useless. When we were about to return I heard a quick breath from him. After half an hour of redoubled efforts we succeeded in rescuing him.

He told us that he was a clerk in an office. Lost in bad company and luxuries he had wasted all his wealth. Then once he took from the office some money for gambling which he couldn't replace. Being desperate he tried to commit suicide. Later I learnt from him that he had taken only seven pounds and ten shillings. So I gave him that money, the Sergeant promised not to report the case and the landlady offered one month's free lodging till he got a new job. Thus the young man regained his life.

V. Appreciation of the poem 'The Ballad of Father Gilligan'

The Ballad of Father Gilligan is a touching narrative poem by W.B Yeats. The poem is composed in the form of a Ballad. The poem is about a priest, father Gilligan who rendered selfless service to the poor and the needy in his Parish. The ballad also tells us about the mercy of God to his devotees . The poem is rich in imagery and follows a strict rhyme scheme abcb.

The old priest Father Gilligan was in charge of a parish. There was an epidemic in his area. Almost half of his parishioners were either sick or dead. The priest was tired of doing his priestly duties. One day after the day's busy schedule while he was sitting in his chair, a poor man sent for him. The priest started complaining that he had no rest or joy. Suddenly he realized his mistake and asked for God's forgiveness. He knelt and begged to God for forgiveness, and in the prayer he fell asleep leaning over his chair. He woke up only in the following morning at the time of sparrow chirp. Then he realized that he failed to do his priestly duties. So within no time he roused his horse and went to the sick man's house. The sick man's wife informed him that the man died as merry as a bird immediately after the priest left him.. On hearing this father Gilligan understood that God had sent one of his angels to help him to do his duty. Father praised God for showing his benevolence and kindness towards him. He expressed his gratitude to the merciful God.

Thus the poem beautifully narrates the story of God's timely intervention in the life of a poor priest.

The poem is rich in imagery. 'The green sods' , 'rocky lane', 'moth hour 'etc are some of the visual images. 'The sparrow chirp' and 'the wind that shook the leaves', are examples of auditory image in the poem. 'The stars began to peep' is an instance of personification. The poetic device simile can be seen in the line 'The man died as merry as a bird '.The use of alliteration also adds beauty to the poem.
